The background image is a wide-angle shot of an ancient stone temple, likely in Southeast Asia. Two Buddhist monks in bright orange robes are walking away from the camera through a large, ornate stone doorway. The temple's facade is made of dark, weathered stone blocks and features intricate carvings of figures and patterns. To the right of the doorway, there are several smaller, arched niches containing carved statues. The ground is paved with large, flat stone slabs. The lighting is warm, suggesting late afternoon or early morning, with long shadows cast across the stone surfaces.

Cultural and History

The only source of knowledge is experience. It's the reason why cultural and historical tourism is never out of date no matter how many trends have been appeared then disappeared. Let's take a journey with our special "time machine" back to a hundred or thousand years ago. Each architectural work or a historical site has been imbued with its checkered history. Only when you delve into either naturally-made or man-made marvelous beauty, all the great hidden values are truly transferred. Also, a wide variety of intangible cultural heritages, prosperous lifestyle of local people and the national symbols within the Southeast Asia region is cautiously conveyed in each detail of products.
